

Eureka Springs!

A play in two short acts
(for narrator and brass quartet)

by Bryan Reeder, 2008

"Take your books of mere poetry and prose; let me read a time table, with tears of pride."

G.K. Chesterton

Eureka Springs! notes:

This is a play in two short acts. There is no break between acts, just a short pause. There is a narrator and musical accompaniment. The text and music follow a score that determines the relationship of their timing.

The narrator stands in front of the brass quartet. There may be, though this is not necessary, a projection screen behind the brass quartet upon which will be projected a series of still photographs of the sort one may find in a guidebook or on a postcard of the town Eureka Springs, Arkansas.

For reasons of space, the text found in the musical score is not complete. See the following page for the text in its entirety.

The three hash marks on the stem of a note indicate a very light unmeasured tongue. It does not mean flutter tongue. The tongue should create a soft beating sound in the tone (do, do, do). The tonguing should be a consistent speed, but may differ from other player's speeds.

Mutes required for trumpet: cup mute & straight mute.

Mutes required for trombone: straight mute
